Q5) Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below:

Even things which are not man-made (e.g. plants, rocks, planets, and people) have purposes or functions, and the “good” for anything is the realization of its purpose or function.

The good for us human beings is happiness, the living of a flourishing life. Happiness or flourishing consists in the fulfillment of our distinctive nature, what we “by nature” do best. That involves the development and exercise of our capacities for rationality, abstract knowledge, deliberative choice, imagination, friendship, social cooperation based on a sense of justice, etc. The moral virtues (e.g. courage, justice, benevolence, temperance) are character traits that help us fulfill our true nature. The life of the heroin addict or of the carnal hedonist is not a good one, because it is inconsistent with our natural function.

Natural law is the set of truths about morality and justice; they are rules that we must follow in order to lead a good or flourishing life. We can know what these principles are by means of unaided human reason. [The natural law theory of morality rejects ethical subjectivism (“right and wrong are all a matter of opinion”) and affirms ethical objectivism (“some moral opinions are more valid, reasonable, or likely to be true than others”)]. Immoral acts violate natural law. Hence, immoral behavior is “unnatural” (in the sense of “contrary to our function,” not “nowhere to be found in the natural world”), whereas virtuous behavior is “natural.” For example, lying is unnatural, Aquinas holds, because the function of speech is to communicate to others what is in our minds. When we use words to mislead others, we are using them contrary to their proper function.

Legal systems have a function-to secure justice. Grossly unjust laws (e.g. “White people may own Black people as slaves,” “women may not own property or vote”) are not really laws at all, but a perversion of law or mere violence. As St. Augustine put it, lax injustia non est lex. Aquinas’ sway of stating this point: positive law has as its purpose the common good of the community. Any positive law which conflicts/is inconsistent with either natural law or divine law is not really law at all. Hence, not only is there no moral obligation to obey it, but there is no legal obligation to obey it, either. Augustine, Aquinas, and Martin Luther King are supporters of this view.

Questions:

- i) What does good mean for human beings? [4]
- ii) Define natural law? [4]
- iii) Why is unnatural behavior considered to be against natural law? [3]
- iv) How is positive law inconsistent with natural law? [3]
- v) Suggest the appropriate title. [2]
